is such an arrangement, said it consists in enabling foreign Governments to entrust the execution of a process in Japan to a foreign official, from anxiety "the completion of a satisfactory order of laws, by the institution of a court which shall not be influenced by the power of the Government, by the appointment of experienced local officers and the association with it of a foreign official, and allowing foreign consular officials to prove that their countrymen are denied for delay of justice." We may safely assure the Japanese that whenever they succeed in offering such guarantees to the treaty Powers there will be no difficulty in the execution or extension of extraterritorial privileges. The Japanese Government, however, said laws may be borrowed from other countries "imposed on the spot, it could not by any act of authority receive immediate application."

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to the pages containing the Chinese characters enables the reader to understand fully and to communicate freely with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully and which, very few of these people previously acquainted to parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be valuable economically.

It comprises upwards of two thousand large quarto pages.
